Gender Identity and Reproductive Autonomy

(<https://transactivists.org/gender-identity-reproductive-autonomy/>)

Gender identity and reproductive autonomy analyzes how the combination of the right to found a family with the right to benefit from scientific progress and access to it by any person regardless their sexual orientation or gender identity has generated a deconstruction of biology, sex, gender and roles.

IS NOT AN ILLNESS *How
pathologizing
trans people violates
human rights law*

(<https://transactivists.org/gender-is-not-an-illness/>)

Gender is not an illness (<https://transactivists.org/gender-is-not-an-illness/>)

Gender is not an illness presents the argument that the pathologization of trans people infringes international human rights law, and leads to a range of human rights violations across civil and political, economic, social and cultural rights. This argument is supported by international human rights jurisprudence and standards as interpreted by United Nations (UN) and regional human rights bodies and mechanisms.

Intersex and the Yogyakarta Principles + 10

Background

The Yogyakarta Principles<sup>1</sup> were first created in 2006, primarily at an expert meeting in Yogyakarta, Indonesia. The intention was (and remains) to apply international human rights law to sexual orientation and gender identity. The new 2017 Supplement extends the Principles to formally also include sex characteristics and gender expression.

Intersex and the Yogyakarta Principles Plus 10

(<https://transactivists.org/intersex-and-the-yogyakarta-principles-10/>)

GATE Fact Sheet on Intersex and the Yogyakarta Principles + 10 is a guideline for how the Principles can be used as a tool by people and organisations for advocacy. While widely cited in relation to the rights of people of diverse sexual orientation and (to a lesser extent) gender identity, the Principles have had even less impact in promoting the rights of intersex people.
